Broadview* wins top awards for faith-based publishing in Canada and in North America

Broadview magazine and Broadview.org won three top honours from two faith-based journalism associations.

On Wednesday, April 8, the Canadian Christian Communicators Association \(CCCA\) awarded Broadview:

- General Excellence in Print – Magazine

The judges for this category wrote: “If the church were a camera this magazine would be its panoramic lens. Aptly named, it takes a refreshingly broad view of the gospel and the attendant implications for humanity.... Provocative articles cover an impressive range of thematic territory... [They] cut to the core of how to live as people of faith – with each other, society and the planet we inhabit.”

- General Excellence in Website Design

On Thursday, April 9, the Associated Church Press \(ACP\), a North America-wide association for mainline Christian journalism, awarded Broadview:

- Best in Class: National/International Magazine

The judges for this category wrote: “Broadview is well balanced between news and feature, opinion and art, and light topics and heavy.... As an overall magazine, Broadview serves readers best and most.”

“We are so pleased and honoured to receive this recognition from both the CCCA and the ACP,” says Broadview’s Editor-Publisher, Jocelyn Bell. “When our 192-year-old publication was rebranded Broadview two years ago, we set a lofty goal to become the best faith-based magazine in North America. These awards encourage us in our efforts.”

Broadview also received 15 other awards from the CCCA and 14 other awards from the ACP. For a full list of all awards, please go to broadview.org/2021-ccca-acp-award-winners/.
